The apportionment of school moneys in the year above mentioned was $30,000, but $14,000 additional was required to meet the growing ex-penses of the schools, and, of course, there being no appropriations to meet this large deficiency, it had to be provided for by a special levy.

This is one of the worst of all the flimsy statements. In 1889 a special school tax was levied in Phoenix District and not $2.50 as given in this wonderful filmsy statements. In 1889 a special school tax was levied in Phoenix District for the purpose of providing money for building the two new school houses last year. This money was paid into the hands year.
